When Kevin Hart was first approached about "The Upside," he saw it as a chance to explore another side to his talents.

While his character Dell still has a sense of humor and mischievous spark as the unlikely caregiver to the billionaire quadriplegic Phillip, played by Bryan Cranston, the comedian and actor also had to explore more dramatic and emotional territory than he is accustomed to.

"It is a switch," Kevin Hart admits to Metro. "A nice little change of gears to sneakily take my fanbase in the direction that they didn't know that I was capable of going in."

"It is not to say this is who I am or that this is what I am going to do all the time. This is a glimpse of what you are going to see more of as time goes on. I am just baby-stepping people into it."

Surprisingly, "The Upside" director Neil Burger originally wasn't convinced that Hart was right for the film.

"When they first mentioned Kevin Hart, I was a little bit like, 'Oh, really?'" says Burger. "I went and looked back at his comedy and what I realized was that he is a storyteller. Which I knew was integral to tell a drama."

"Then when I met him, I immediately knew he was so committed to the dramatic possibilities. And to doing something different. And to playing a character who is based on a real human being, and to playing it in a real human way."

While Hart was stepping out of his comfort zone for this remake of the critically acclaimed 2011 French comedy-drama "The Intouchables," the fact that "The Upside" was shot in his home town of Philadelphia meant he couldn't have been in safer surroundings. Crowds even gathered to watch Hart shoot scenes in Kensington.

"This is the first time I have actually shot in Philadelphia. It was amazing to go home," says Hart. "Shooting some days was tough. We had people lined up on the streets."

"We'd be in the middle of a take and then you'd hear, 'Yo Kev! Yo Kev Hart, what the f—k is up, man! You better say what's up, man! Your little a—! You better turn around and say, 'Hi!' You better! You shut this s—t down out here, man!'"

Ultimately, though, Hart believes that "The Upside" has added yet another string to his increasingly expanding bow.

"The good thing about this is that, at this point in my career, stumbling upon this road and saying, 'Wow, I can go down this road. And I can do a lot of cool things.' It is something that is exciting."

"It adds a boost to the career. I have another door that I can go through and it has opened up and it makes me think I can attack a film like this at the highest level possible. I am constantly thinking, 'How can I gain success here? How can I make the résumé more impressive?'"

"The Upside" hits theaters Jan. 11.

"Victoria" is back for season 3. PBS

What to watch on TV this weekend

"True Detective" returns on Sunday. HBO

From the return of "True Detective" to "Victoria," here's what you should tune into.

ANDREW HUSBAND

After the first full week of the new year sported a sizable mix of new shows and returning favorites, the winter TV season is gearing up for business as usual. That means we're in for the never-ending deluge of "Peak TV" thanks to broadcast, cable and premium networks, streaming giants like Netflix, and hopeful upstarts like Facebook Watch. From the third season of HBO's "True Detective" to the return of the PBS period drama "Victoria," here's what to watch on TV this weekend.

24th Annual Critics' Choice Awards,
Jan. 13 at 7 p.m. on The CW

Now that the Golden Globes are over, the 2019 awards season is about to kick into high gear. The Grammys telecast is in early February, while the still-hostless Oscars are slated for March. Until then, audiences can treat themselves to the far less serious Critics' Choice Awards this Sunday on The CW. Blockbuster films like "Black Panther" and "A Star Is Born" are on the docket, as are fantastic TV shows like "The Americans" and "Escape at Dannemora."

"True Detective,"
Jan. 13 at 9 p.m. on HBO

On the heels of a lackluster second season that disappointed critics and audiences alike, Nic Pizzolatto's HBO anthology series "True Detective" returns Sunday at 9 p.m. with two back-to-back new episodes. This time around, the cerebral police procedural follows Det. Wayne Hays (Mahershala Ali) as he reflects on a decades-old child abduction case that went wrong in every possible way. Stephen Dorff and Carmen Ejogo also star in the popular thriller's latest story.

"Victoria,"

Jan. 13 at 9 p.m. on PBS
After two seasons that aired in 2016 and 2017, first in the United Kingdom and then in the United States, the period piece drama "Victoria" is back for season 3. Created by Daisy Goodwin and starring "Doctor Who" alum Jenna Coleman as the titular queen, "Victoria" also features Tom Hughes as Prince Albert and a who's who of British acting royalty and newcomers. The premiere episode, "Uneasy Lies the Head That Wears the Crown," airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on PBS.

"Valley of the Boom,"

Jan. 13 at 9 p.m. on National Geographic
With "Mars," National Geographic put its mark on the TV map with a docu-drama series combining documentary interview with scripted drama segments. The cable channel hopes to do the same with its latest, "Valley of the Boom," which homes in on the 1990s tech boom in and around Silicon Valley. "West Wing" alum Bradley Whitford and "New Girl" alum Lamorne Morris lead the cast.

There's no wintering in Florida for Daniel Bruce. In fact, the Boston Harbor Hotel's executive chef is at his busiest this time of year. In addition to overseeing the hotel's restaurants, he heads the Boston Wine Festival, which begins Friday and runs through to the end of March.

That makes it the longest running event of its kind, and this year's festival includes 36 different wine-and-food pairing events, from sit-down dinners with winemakers; dine-around, drink-around buffets, like the opening gala; seminars; and a special bubbly-infused Valentine's brunch and dinner dance.

"It's pretty insane, isn't it?" says festival founder Bruce of entering his fourth decade organizing and overseeing the festival. "I have been doing this festival since 1989, but I really began before, back in New York at the 21 Club. While I was chef there I did small wine-pairing dinners and people were so happy about those. I brought that idea with me to Boston and turned it into this festival.

"Really, it's not like other wine festivals. It's really wine dinners," he continues. "Most wine festivals are weekends or three days; mine is 12 weeks long. To my knowledge, there's no where else in the world doing something like this."

For the first couple of years, Bruce found it hard to persuade winemakers to come to Boston in the winter to appear at an unknown event.

"What winemaker in his right mind would come to Boston in the winter?" Bruce jokes. He started small, relatively, with two months and 10 dinners. Apart from expanding, the festival has undergone few changes.

"Thirty years later, there are more things that are the same than there are differences. The big difference is that winemakers now seek me out. They know who I

Besides enjoying good food and good wines, Bruce relishes the festival's communal aspect, either mingling or sitting down for dinner at shared tables. He has made many friends over the 30 years, both with the winemakers he's working with and with guests who return each year. "After four glasses of wine it is more than likely you will have made a friend by the end of the evening," he confirms.

Newcomers need not worry, spitting and swish-

"For 30 years, I have been at every dinner. There's not one that I have missed. It's never felt like work, it's just a natural thing I wanted to do."

NJ TRANSIT BENCHES

Nancy Oneness complained that there were no benches at NJT at Penn Station in NYC. When I was there Dec. 31, there were plenty of seats in the waiting area, which, as I recall, is near the info desk and the WCs. The area she seems to have described is the corridor for boarding, with access to the gates. She needs to ask for directions to the waiting area.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BENCHES

In response to Nancy Oneness' Grumble, I think I can answer her question as to why there is little consideration for travelers at commuting hubs who are desperate to sit. It's because they don't want to encourage homeless people to loiter and use those seats for beds. Plain and simple, even though it's unfortunate.

In a new installment of L.A. vs. Boston, the Pats host the Chargers in the AFC Divisional Round.

sports@metro.us

During the Patriots' dominant run over the years, they've rarely faced an opponent in their first game as good as the team traveling to Gillette Stadium on Sunday, particularly after earning a first-round bye. The 12-4 Chargers actually own a better regular-season record than the 11-5 Patriots, but the AFC West was won by the Chiefs, leaving L.A. as the top Wild Card seed.

Philip Rivers gets his first crack at postseason revenge against the Patriots since losing the 2007 AFC Championship game in Foxborough after beating the Ravens last week.

The Patriots opened up as four-point favorites in this Divisional Round matchup, a round in which New England has consistently found itself a double-digit favorite in past years. The Chargers deserve the respect, earning their way into the class of the AFC.

Here are three things to watch for during this spectacular matchup on Sunday from Gillette.

THROWBACK QB MATCHUP

The 78 years of combined age between the 41-year-old Tom Brady and 37-year-old Philip Rivers will be the oldest quarterback matchup in NFL postseason history. With the trend in the NFL shifting toward mobile signal callers, Brady and Rivers — while both gritty players — represent a duel between two classic pocket passers. That's something we rarely see these days.

Philip Rivers and Tom Brady meet on Sunday in the AFC Divisional Round. GETTY IMAGES

Rivers is 0-7 for his career against Brady, where he has just seven touchdown passes to 10 interceptions.

There are two different ways you can look at those numbers: They're either going to hold true and Rivers isn't going to get over the hump against this team, or in the final stages of his career he's due for a win with maybe the best supporting cast he's ever had.

HOME COOKING VS. ROAD WARRIORS

Brady's 7-0 record against

Rivers is an interesting trend, but more of a historical one. A much more relevant trend is how these two teams have performed in home and road games this season.

The Patriots are a perfect 8-0 at Gillette in 2018, while the Chargers are 8-1 on the road this season if you count the playoff victory in Baltimore. The funny part is, that sole road loss came against the Rams, so they didn't even leave Los Angeles.

That leaves the Chargers at a perfect 8-0 on games they've had to get on an airplane and travel for. After winning an early afternoon game on the East Coast last week, you can take all the narratives you want about road games on opposite coasts, but L.A. has proven it can beat anyone, anywhere, this season.

SNOW BOWL II?

If this matchup wasn't already good enough, it's very likely we're going to see some snow on Sunday in Foxborough. In fact, the forecast suggests we may see blizzard-like conditions.

I would never doubt this Chargers team with what they've been able to accomplish on the road this season, but we can go back to the historical trends between these two quarterbacks for an indication of what this weather may effect.

Rivers has played in a mere five games below 32 degrees, owning just a 1-4 record in those contests. He'll have some adjusting to do on Sunday. Brady's history of thriving in freezing temperatures is well documented — owning an unthinkable 32-7 record.

As Brady's career winds down, wouldn't it be something to see his career back in a similar place to where he made a name for himself 17 years ago? A snowy 2001 Divisional Round matchup in Foxborough against an AFC West opponent — the Oakland Raiders — launched Brady's career. We all remember how that one ended. This could be a similar game in terms of living up to the hype against the Chargers.

Always hiding your
COMMON WARTS?

Right now, doctors at SkinCare Physicians in Chestnut Hill are seeking participants (ages 2 or older) for a new clinical research study. The study is for a new topical solution (applied twice weekly) for common warts — which can appear in many places on the body, often on the fingers, hands, elbows, or knees.

If you participate, you or your child will receive study-related care at no cost, and compensation for you time and travel to attend study visits.

How to sleep for free (or nearly free) when traveling

Credit card rewards can be your ticket to a dream destination. But even if you've earned what you need to get to where you're going, the accommodations could be a different story.

What do you do if you don't have enough points or miles left for lodging? You can slash those costs, too, if you're willing to get out of your comfort zone. That might mean couch-surfing with locals, agreeing to a home exchange or signing up for housesitting. Websites and apps can help you connect with frugal options domestically and abroad. You may be able to stay for free, or nearly free, if you're flexible with dates and can abide by house rules.

Couch-surfing
This option works for solo travelers or couples looking to make new friends over a few nights. Since you're staying in someone's home, you'll likely need to "check in and out" at reasonable hours and clean up after yourself.

For Alexander Salas, who runs the YouTube channel Alex Travelbum, giving up some freedom is worth it. He uses the app from Couchsurfing.com, which has allowed him to sleep in 15 countries for free. His trip to Naples, Italy, was the most memorable, he says.

"I stayed with this woman who was just the most generous, nicest person in the world, and we're still friends to this day," Salas says. "She made me all of this authentic Italian food and took me around town."

Housesitting

If you don't mind pets or a few chores while you

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Amanda Kelly, solo traveler and content creator at Amanda Round the Globe, generally seeks female hosts when she couch-surfs. During a trip to Belgium, she says, she was deceived by a man pretending to be a female host.

Other best practices

Look for hosts who have several positive references, photos and detailed descriptions.

- See how your host behaves on social media.
- Set up a video meet-and-greet.
- Make sure you're on the same page with house rules and expectations of privacy.
- Tell a family member or friend where you're staying.
- Have a Plan B in case the accommodations aren't a good fit.

If that sounds like too much hassle — or if you're just not interested in a stranger's couch, house or chores — consider ways to save on more traditional accommodations.

Join a hotel loyalty program, for example, or consider applying for a hotel credit card. The right one can earn you rewards toward future stays, and many cards even offer a free anniversary night, usually in exchange for an annual fee. MELISSA LAMBARENA

Trump walks out on Democrats, threatens border emergency

The walkout comes a day before the president's trip to the southern border.

President Donald Trump stormed out of talks with Democratic congressional leaders on Wednesday over funding for a border wall with Mexico and reopening the government, complaining the meeting in the White House was "a total waste of time."

On the 19th day of a partial government shutdown caused by the dispute over the wall, a short meeting that included Trump, Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer and House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi ended in acrimony with no sign of a resolution.

President Trump on Capitol Hill. GETTY IMAGES

Nancy, a total waste of time," Trump wrote on Twitter. "I asked what is going to happen in 30 days if I quickly open things up, are you going to approve Border Security which includes a Wall or Steel Barrier?" Trump wrote. "Nancy said, NO. I said bye-bye, nothing else works!"

Exasperated Democrats called Trump's behavior a "temper tantrum" and said the meeting broke down when they refused to commit to funding his proposed southern border wall. Trump's desire for a wall between the United States and Mexico was a central theme of his 2016 presidential campaign.

Schumer told reporters that Trump asked Pelosi if she would fund his wall. "She said no. And he just got up and said: 'Then we have nothing to discuss,' and he just walked out."

"Again, we saw a temper tantrum because he couldn't get his way,"

Schumer added. "That is sad and unfortunate. We want to come to an agreement. We believe in border security. We have different views."

The breakdown in talks could strengthen the possibility that Trump will declare a national emergency to build a wall on the southern border if no deal with Congress can be reached on his request for $5.7 billion for the project.

Earlier on Wednesday, Trump said he had the authority to declare a national emergency that would let him pay for the wall with military funds. Vice President Mike Pence told reporters that Trump is still considering that option.

Asked what Trump had gained by walking out of the talks, Pence said: "I think the president made his position very clear today: that there will be no deal without a wall."

Shortly after the White House meeting broke up, the Democratic-majority House of Representatives voted to pass legislation to end a partial shutdown of the Treasury Department and some other agencies that have been closed since Dec. 22, without money for the wall.

But there was no indication that the Senate, controlled by Trump's fellow Republicans, would allow a vote on the bill. REUTERS

Amazon's Jeff Bezos and wife announce divorce

Next up: How to split the Amazon chief's $160B.

Amazon.com founder and CEO Jeff Bezos and his wife MacKenzie. GETTY IMAGES

Amazon founder and Chief Executive Jeff Bezos, the world's richest man, and wife MacKenzie are divorcing after 25 years of marriage, the couple said on Twitter on Wednesday.

Bezos, 54, has a fortune that has soared as high as $160 billion thanks to his stake in Amazon, which again became Wall Street's most valuable company this week, surpassing Microsoft.

Bezos has credited MacKenzie, 48, for her support when he uprooted the young couple from New York to Seattle so he could launch the online bookseller that grew into one of the world's largest retailers. MacKenzie, a Princeton graduate who is now a novelist, did accounting for Amazon for its first year after it was founded in 1994.

The couple decided to divorce after a long period of "loving exploration" and trial separation, and expect to continue as partners in joint ventures and projects, according to the joint statement.

Reuters was unable to determine any further financial details of the planned divorce.

Amazon did not immediately return requests for comment about the status of the Bezos ownership stake or what impact the divorce might have on the company.

MacKenzie Bezos met her husband when interviewing for a job at a New York hedge fund, according to a 2013 profile in Vogue. The two were engaged after three months of dating and married three months after that, according to the magazine. The pair have four children.

Speaking at an event in Berlin last April, Jeff Bezos said MacKenzie's support was instrumental when he founded Amazon in 1994, and that she did the accounting for the company in its first year.

"When you have loving and supportive people in your life, like MacKenzie, my parents, my grandfather, my grandmother, you end up being able to take risks," he said at the event.

Bezos in September committed $2 billion through the Bezos Day One Fund to helping homeless families and starting preschools for low-income communities. He had solicited ideas on Twitter in 2017 for ways to donate some of his wealth. REUTERS
